

Thursday, 15th November 2018 inauguration of the project by artist Paolo Monti 37788 "Wave Front - Invisible Cloak" curated by Piero Pala, at the Contemporary Cluster, within the Bauhaus Club Project (curated by Giacomo Guidi).

The installation "Performative kaleidoscope of sound and light waves generates strange attractors in endless feedback" consists in a wave front generated from a video source propagates, in a reflective tunnel, the mirrored images of the perturbation wave rear-projected from its background. The video, realized in analogue without the use of post-processing, transmits the succession of self-generating processes in harmonic retroaction. The feedback of dynamic sequences - triggered by coherent oscillations of sound and light waves - determines the synchronous of sound and images reminiscent of the self-similarity of fractal geometry.

Inside, the tunnel welcomes visitors who, as they traverse it, are enveloped by the propagation of images on the mirrored surfaces. The visitor-participants, wearing a Mylar mirroring cloak, reflect the images until they evanesce into a stochastic holographic camouflage. A context of interaction in which the participant spontaneously gives life to an open systemic event - procedural and dynamic - where every experience becomes personal and the work generates as many points of view as the visitors that interact.

A closed circuit television system integrally exposes, from multiple points of view, the exhibition for its entire duration. Visitors now have the opportunity to re-live the experience in the tunnel transferring their own self-portrait into an historical memory.
